I thought Witherspoon was the Rams' most impressive defensive player at training camp. He hasn't stood out so much during the regular season. The St. Louis defense is worse for his absence, but with rookie middle linebacker James Laurinaitis emerging and the Rams desperate for help at receiver, the move could make sense.

Gibson, was a sixth-round choice this year. He's 6-foot, 210 pounds, giving him good size. He should have a chance to play right away, given the state of the Rams' receivers. Gibson hasn't caught a pass in a regular-season game.
